GOSPEL REFLECTION

Christ "sends" his disciples. In doing so, he uses the kind of formula we find frequently in the fourth gospel: "As the Father has sent me, so I send you." For John, such formulas express more than a simple parallelism; they do more than affirm the divinity of Christ on the grounds that he acts as the Father acts. They are also a theological statement that believers share in the very life that is common to Father and Son.

The formula ends rather abruptly: "I send you." He is not sending them to a place, but giving them a mission that they must carry out. What is the mission? It is that of forgiving sins, as Christ immediately makes clear. Since, however, Christ draws a parallel between his action in sending the disciples and the Father's action in sending him, he is also telling the disciples that they are to continue the work that Jesus himself has been doing for the reconstruction of the world. They too are to do the Father's work. As Jesus reveals the Father and makes him known, so the disciples are to reveal Jesus and make him known.

◆Commissioning the disciples to carry on his ministry, Jesus says, "As the Father has sent me, so I send you." How do these words reverberate with your own faith journey?
